Washington, July 2.—For the first time the public has access to an authentic statement of what the drys spent to get prohibition and to nurse it through the first years of infancy.
Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon league, has revealed to the senate primary campaign fund investigating committee that his organization and its subsidiaries have spent $44,900,000 on federal prohibition. His records reveal that prohibition speakers, while ardent in the cause, nevertheless set values on their services which compare in some instances with those of prime donnas in opera.Some of the best paid prohibition speakers were:The late William J. Bryan—$11, 000 for speeches in 1919.John F. Kramer, first federal prohibition director—$7,500 for one year's work.Richard Pearson Hobson, hero of Santiago Bay, former congressman and father of the prohibition amendment—$171,249.62 between 1914 and 1922.Pussyfoot Johnson—$18,807.12 in salary during 12 years.Rev. Sam Small, noted evangelist—publican—$1,200 in 1919 between the time he was governor of Ohio and his election as senator.

In addition there were 2,000 more worked for nothing. Others were re-

EVERYONE has her favorite way of making coffee. But the actual making is only half the problem.

So much depends on good "creaming"—to bring out the full coffee flavor. The sure way to have it—every time—use Borden's Condensed Milk (sweetened). This smooth blend of full-cream milk and sugar is the secret thousands of women have discovered.

Lawrenceville, Ga., July 2.—(Special)—The Anne Winn chapter of the Order of Eastern Star held its regular meeting at the Masonic hall Thursday evening and had with them Mrs. J. E. McElroy, of Norcross, who is the worthy grand matron of the state. She gave an interesting talk on the order, and the last annual meeting of the state at Macon. Several talks were made by different members of the lodge.

Music was rendered by Mrs. Tandy K. Shackford, organist and by Miss Myrtie Kelley, who sang.

Shipments of cantaloupes and demands of the delicacy by the American public constantly increases, it is stated in the current issue of Tee Pee Flasher, semi-monthly paper of the Texas and Pacific railroad, issued by local officials.

Figures quoted in the latest issue of the paper show that an increase of about 6,000 carloads of cantaloupes was made from 1923 and last season. The market for the fruit and cantaloupe-growing states is set with Arizona second and Georgia third. Other interesting figures of shipments of produce during the past season are given in the paper.

arrived at Fusan, Korea, at 10 o'clock this morning and embarked for Shimonoseki 30 minutes later. We are now in the Pacific. The 16th day of our trip we attempted to break the record for circling the globe. Tomorrow we should reach Yokohama about 7 days ahead of the record of John Henry Mears, who completed the circling of the globe in a few hours less than 26 days.

In our brief diary today, yesterday, we wrote and flashed in the few minutes we could spare from the business of breaking a record, we were unable to explain that our paths parted at Harbin. I flew to Mukden by myself this ride and reached the Chinese front at Harbin yesterday. We discovered that the plane which Chang Tsao Lin had sent for us was a one-seater. His officers had had the idea of keeping the plane for the record attempt to break the record for circling the globe. Tomorrow we should reach Yokohama about 7 days ahead of the record of John Henry Mears, who completed the circling of the globe in a few hours less than 26 days.

At Harbin there was 30 minutes of feverish discussion. Finally Wells and I decided that one of us must break the record at any cost and that the surest way to do this was to split up. I took the plane for the 420-mile flight. Wells took the train to Ailingting, risking a connection there for Mukden.

I think the lowest point of the trip for both of us was when we divided our wardrobes and the reason that we did not finish the trip together. Wells took his toothbrush and a change of clothes and I felt the least I could do was to throw in the family comb.

Linton climbed up to the platform of his luxurious coach and said, "I'm glad when he says me in my mob."

However, it was worth it for the reunion at Mukden. I arrived long before Linton and was waiting for him on the platform. He had made all his connections on the dot. His grin when he saw me in my mob.

He was a good sport, but he seemed to indicate that he was fully as glad to see me as I was to see him.

We posed for countless pictures and were presented with a great basket of flowers by the South Manchurian railway.

I was met here at the end of my flight by General Chow Pei Ping, a member of Chang Tsao Lin's air staff.

He felt very badly over the situation and said that he would have sent two or a dozen planes if he had known we were in trouble.

General Sibley, at Mukden, has done wonderful work for us. He has a splendid personality and a reputation which in itself enhances American prestige throughout Manchuria.

The railroad officials decided to be on the road to Mukden once they sent us from Mukden to Fusan on a train which was to make a 31 hours' trip in 24 hours. This was successful in doing.

The worst of our trip is over now.

A train ride across the Pacific to the Empress of Asia and the flight across America stand between us and a record of 27 or 28 days. We fully expect now to be in New York before the middle of July, probably more than a week ahead of most of the world.

Our standing, compared with previous globe circlers, is as follows:

We are virtually certain to reach

Yokohama on our 17th day of travel.

JONES TROPHIES WILL BE PLACED IN ATLANTA CLUB

New York, July 2.—(Special)—

Through action taken at a meeting of members of the United States Golf association, headed by Andrew W. Conrie, president, and J. McMahon, executive secretary of the organization, at the Hotel Vanderbilt today, the trophy room of the new Atlanta Athletic club will be the resting place of three of the world's greatest golfers.

The committee voted to place on exhibition at the Atlanta club the Bobby cup, won by Bobby and Watts and their associates in Great Britain.

In addition, the trophy for the 420-mile flight, won by Bobby and the new gold record holder at Harbin, however, knew the details of the trip and as soon as they discovered that a small plane had been set, got a special train ready for it.

At Harbin there was 30 minutes of feverish discussion. Finally Wells and I decided that one of us must break the record at any cost and that the surest way to do this was to split up.

Wells took the plane for the 420-mile flight, Wells took the train to Ailingting, risking a connection there for Mukden.

I think the lowest point of the trip for both of us was when we divided our wardrobes and the reason that we did not finish the trip together. Wells took his toothbrush and a change of clothes and I felt the least I could do was to throw in the family comb.

"What wet congressmen is in the pay of the liquor interests?" demanded Reed.

Representative Hill, Mayland republican, has received pay for speeches because we've debated together," replied Wheeler.

"So you both held a hobbypole for the glory of God, the good of the commonwealth and the benefit of your pocketbooks?" Reed suggested.

"We're the same as the wet's," insisted Wheeler.

"But, doctor," Reed asked with mock seriousness, "why do you hide under the villainous coat-tails of a wicked man?"

"Well, the wet's did it first," Wheeler retorted. "At this Reed turned to a page and said, "Give me a glass of water."

"Make it two," said Wheeler brightly.

"We're all in dry dock now," Reed and Wheeler lifted their glasses.

"Here's to you doctor," said Reed bowing as if it were a toast to the Prince of Wales.

Wheeler drained his glass without a word. This drinking scene probably will go into political legend as the most comical performance of this congress.

By this time word had reached Representative Hill over in the house chamber that Wheeler had accused him of taking pay for wet speeches. The congressmen's committee dictated a letter to Reed demanding an opportunity to deny the charge.

"Wheeler's statement is absolutely false," Hill said in a statement. "He got aid and I refused it. I have never received one cent of pay for making a speech or for any other service. I received an contribution from any liquor interest and when I was practicing law I never represented any liquor interests. I contribute to the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment but they do not contribute to it."

Hill returned check.

Hill said he was offered $100 or $150 for his part in the New York debate with Wheeler, but returned the check. He accepted railroad fare for a trip to Nebraska to debate with U. S. Senator and Nebraska exposition, which staged the debate, paid for the tickets, he said.

The senate also confirmed the action of the bill to increase the pension of all disabled veterans, which will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock from the chapel of H. M. Patterson, Son.

The Rev. Marvin Williams will officiate and interment will be in the Westview cemetery.

Mr. Milam came to Atlanta in 1891 from Marion, S. C. and engaged in the livery business of the firm of Milam & Miller until his retirement seven years ago.

During the war between the states Mr. Milam served as a member of the Fourteenth Georgia regiment.

NEGRO SLAYER, FREE FOUR YEARS, CAUGHT

For being a fugitive for more than a half a year, Hubert Moore, negro, who was arrested in Birmingham, Ala., recently, will be returned to Atlanta to face trial on an indictment charging murder which was committed Friday by the Fulton county grand jury.

The president also informed congress that he had introduced a bill to authorize oil and gas leases on unallotted land within executive and Indiana reservations.

The Indiana recessed at 11 p. m. without acting on the adjournment resolution, but leaders said it would not be until 10 a. m. tomorrow they predict that there would be no formidable opposition to its adoption, and confidently went ahead with plans for the wind-up of the session at 3 o'clock.

SOME MEASURES PASSED BY CONGRESS.

A benefit barbecue will be given to day at 12:30 o'clock at Grant park by Division No. 21, Ladies' Auxiliary Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. Proceeds will go to the auxiliary.

LAKEWOOD AVIATION FIELD OPENS TODAY

Preliminary opening of the new Lakewood aviation field, with the first two of the fleet of seven airplanes which are to operate there, will be made at 10 o'clock this morning, it was announced Friday by Captain A. R. McMullen, commander of the fleet and operator of the largest squadron of commercial and passenger airplanes in the south. He will have exclusive control of the Lakewood field, which will be known as the McMullen air-port.

The new field, located on the south side of Lakewood park, the South-eastern fair grounds, is approximately four miles from the center of Atlanta and South Pryor street by automobile or out Stewart Avenue and Lakewood Avenue to South Pryor street, or 30 minutes from the center of town on the Washington to Lakewood street car line.

Work is now in progress for more than the level plateau top of the long ridge that circles the southern side of the fair grounds at Lakewood. Trees that surrounded the plateau, leveled originally for an ante-bellum farm, have been cut down to afford safe and easy access to the flying field from all directions.

McMullen, planes, varying in size from swift army scout planes to be used in special messenger and express service to big five-seater passenger ships for commercial flying and passenger transportation, will all be housed in hangars to be built at the field before the formal opening which is to be held before the end of this month. Prior to completion of hangar planes will be parked on the field.

Planes now at the field will make exhibition flights during the three-day Fourth of July celebration which opens at Lakewood park today.

SLAYING OF NEGRO JUSTIFIED, JURY FINDS AT INQUEST

Courtesy Paul Donehoo and a jury Friday morning found the slaying of the unidentified negro by Police Officer Walker yesterday to be justifiable homicide.

The negro had not been identified late Friday night. His body is at the undertaking establishment of Cox brothers, on Auburn avenue, where the inquest was held.

He was surprised by Officer Nash, a suspect who had been employed by the Zaks bakery to guard their property at 86 Garnett street. The officer was concealed in a motor truck in the garage when the negro broke in and began robbing the truck, he said.

"I placed the negro under arrest and he struck me with a brick, knocking me back several feet. I then took my gun from its scabbard and the negro grabbed me, trying to take the weapon from my hand. In the scuffle he was fatally shot," the officer said.

EDDIE RICKENBACKER SEES DIXIE AWAKENING

Eddie Rickenbacker, one of the most famous flying aces of the world war produced, and now vice president of the Rickenbacker Motor company, arrived in Atlanta Friday on official business for the company. Mr. Rickenbacker will spend the weekend at Lakewood as the guest of S. E. Shields, of the Shields Motor company. He will be in Atlanta and vicinity for about a week.

Mr. Rickenbacker is returning to Detroit from Florida, where he has been serving the Florida Airways corporation in an advisory capacity.

He expressed enthusiasm over the awakening prosperity of Georgia, declaring that the "southeast is no longer thought of as a winter resort, but is generally recognized as one of the most prosperous sections of the United States."

"Georgia has the finest all-year round climate of any state in the country," he said. "And is rich in industrial opportunities. The south is undergoing the greatest awakening since the Civil War, and it will show the greatest development of any section in the next 20 years."

Mr. Rickenbacker believes that air service between Georgia and Florida will be established in the near future.

It is feasible today, he said, declaring that the time was not far distant when it will be necessary.

As captain in the air service of the American expeditionary forces Mr. Rickenbacker distinguished himself in many encounters with enemy planes. He is credited with having brought down 26 German aeroplanes.

SENATE APPROVES DILL RADIO BILL

Washington, July 2.—(AP)—The Bill to set up an independent commission to regulate the radio broadcasting industry was passed today by the Senate.

It goes to conference between house and senate conferees.

The measure is a substitute of the White bill passed by the house and was attacked mainly on the ground that it would set up an additional independent commission in Washington, the White bill would have invested the regulatory powers in the department of commerce.

On motion of Senator Robinson, democrat, Arkansas, the senate voted to make the commission of five members instead of seven to be selected from each of the five zones into which the nation would be divided. The commissioners would receive $10,000 each year.

The senate also voted to instruct its conferees to insist upon senate amendment.

In support of an amendment to prohibit the broadcasting of talks on evolution, which he introduced Friday, Senator Black, democrat, South Carolina, declared that he was the side of Jesus Christ and would keep off the air people who supported the theory that man had not been created by God.

It was announced Friday by the prison commission. Batchelor is now at the state prison at Milledgeville, where he was under observation of physicians.

Batchelor was convicted of killing

Mrs. Fannie Anderson, his mother-in-law, last August. He was sentenced to death, but his sentence was commuted on Thursday by the governor, less than 24 hours before the time set for the execution.

Bankruptcy Petition Against Poultryman Is Ordered Published

Notice of bankruptcy petition is to be served by publication on J. A. Kelley, local produce merchant who disappeared mysteriously about a week ago, under an order signed Friday by Judge Samuel H. Sibley, of the federal district court for north Georgia.

Petition asking for a receivership for Kelley's business was filed Tuesday by Wofford-Terrell company, Green and Miami and J. W. Hipp and Sons. Mr. Kelley's wrecked car was found on the Chattahoochee river bridge on the Bolton road the day after his disappearance. He was thought at first he had met with foul play or had committed suicide. Search of the river failed to bring to light any clews.

"Ye shall diligently keep the commandments of the Lord, your God, and His testimonies, and His statutes." Deut. 6:17.

PRAYER—"The Lord be with us as we bend, His blessings to receive."

CONGRESS ENDS TODAY.

The long session of the 69th congress will adjourn today. The short session will begin next December, and although in the November elections a great change may be made in the personnel of both houses, and even a change may be made in one or both houses in party control, the fact remains that even after this election the same congress that is closing its long session will legislate during December, January and February—legislate possibly in direct contravention to the will of the people as may be expressed at the November polls.

Such is the injustice of our present system that initiates a new congress four months, and ten months, alternately, after its election.

The 69th congress—the Coolidge congress, as it will be known in history—has little to its credit but tax reduction, and that was not a party issue. The surplus was in the treasury. Economic soundness demanded that it should be utilized in the reductions of the prevailing income rates. The republicans and democrats got together on a remarkably sensible program and let common sense rather than political sparing dictate a commendable program.

The fact that congress stayed within the figures of the budget commission in its departmental appropriations is to its credit. The budget system itself is a product of a democratic congress during the Wilson administration. Mr. Wilson's first address to congress was a party issue. The surplus was in the treasury. Economic soundness demanded that it should be utilized in the reductions of the prevailing income rates. The republicans and democrats got together on a remarkably sensible program and let common sense rather than political sparing dictate a commendable program.

The world, outside of tax reduction, is to its credit that the issue of international cooperation is paramount to that of prohibition. It says:

"No one will do just because he is wet. Above all, no one will do as democratic candidate for United States senator who is not frank and clearly in line with the national democratic policy of cooperation with the organized agencies of peace in the world. We make that pactfully clear here and now. This newspaper will not support a democrat for United States senator who cannot be depended upon to support a policy of international cooperation."

THE NYE VICTORY.

The victory of Senator Gerald F. Nye, non-partisan leaguer, in North Dakota, over former Governor Hanna, an administration republican and a Coolidge lieutenant, must be construed as another cumulative attack upon the old guard and another evidence that the president is rapidly losing ground in the west and north west.

The defeat of Senator McKinley of Illinois and the victories of, first, County Le Follett and then of Brookhart and now of Nye, simply show by straws the way the tide is moving.

Add to these the ugly situation that has developed in Pennsylvania, following the defeat of Senator Pepper, another of the old guard, and one may naturally surmise from the "listening posts" that the president, who will, it is alleged, seek another full term, will not have an easy sailing in 1928 as he had in 1924.

The failure of the so-called "farm bill" legislation has possibly had much to do with this. But there is a deeper current running, that is, the disposition on the part of the president to dictate through his government—as illustrated in his control of the tariff board—to such an extent that popular sentiment has very naturally set in.

All in all, it ought to be a democratic year. The winds and the tide are favorable. The trouble is the lack of concrete, unbiased party leadership that is not influenced by selfish considerations in the effort to promote sectional alliances with the ultimate motive of serving some prospective candidate's interest for us. If the democratic party is strong enough to blanket the an-tion it is not big enough to win in either congressional or national election. If it is not broad enough to stand upon the tenets of its party faith without being hamstrung and hog-tied in the interest of personal factionalism, it deserves to lose—even though the real, constructive opportunity for winning this year, and playing safe for 1928, were never so bright.

NEW YORK DEMOCRATS.

New York democratic leaders are looking for a candidate for the senate to oppose Wadsworth. It was at one time supposed that Governor Al Smith would make the race, but the leaders are practically unanimous that he shall stand for a fourth term as governor. This is because of the great conservation and state reorganization program he has under way. His administration has been so successful that it would be regarded as a calamity should he lay down the reins until it is completed.

At the opening of the state campaign a few days ago he was placed enthusiastically in nomination by a number of speakers. He did not say yes or no. It is believed, however, that his earnestness in carrying forward to successful completion the work he has undertaken will practically force him into the race, even though unprecedent and undoubtedly at a financial sacrifice to the governor.

For a senatorial candidate all leaders had agreed upon Franklin D. Roosevelt, but his physicians say he must abstain from public life one more year in order to completely regain his health. Speaking of the disappointment that Mr. Roosevelt cannot run for the present, the New York World pays him the following tribute:

"He is fit, he is popular, he is nationally minded, he would have added distinction to the senate and lustre to the New York democracy. Since it is not possible to nominate him it at least succeeds to use him as a standard by which to judge other aspirants."

This is an encomium that is pleasing to Georgians, for Franklin D. Roosevelt is as popular among the people of this state, who know him—and they are legion—as among the people of his state. He recently purchased the Warm Springs property on account of the great benefits to his health that the waters and climate had wrought for him. He spent much of the summer of 1923 at the Georgia springs and found decided relief. He returned in 1924, and has been a frequent visitor since, finally acquiring the property for extensive improvements that he contemplates to make. In the meantime, Georgia has learned to love Franklin Roosevelt and claim him as one of her own. It is gratifying that his health is so rapidly improving that his physicians believe in another year he may throw himself actively again into the affairs of state, on which his long training, party soundness, and unchallengeable rectitude, so ably fit him. He is qualified, in mind and heart, for any trust within the gift of the people, and may yet become the party's standard bearer in a national campaign.

The world, outside of tax reduction, is to its credit that the issue of international cooperation is paramount to that of prohibition.

The world, outside of tax reduction, is to its credit that the issue of international cooperation is paramount to that of prohibition.

DR. ELLIOTT WHITE, FORMER SAVANNAH RECTOR, IS DEAD

Philadelphia, Pa., July 2.—(AP)—The Rev. Dr. Elliott White, 65, archdeacon in charge of work among foreign-born in the Episcopal diocese of Pennsylvania, died here today. He had filled pastorate in Georgia, North Carolina, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and New York.

Paris, July 2.—San Sebastian newspapers announce the imminent engagement of the Prince of Wales and Infanta Beatrice, of Spain, saying that King Alfonso and the queen intend to discuss the details of the marriage with King George and Queen Mary in London.

The newspapers say the prince intends to pass the summer at San Sebastian and Santander, as a guest of the king of Spain, and that the betrothal will be officially announced then.

The question of religion is as easily settled as when King Alfonso married the queen Victoria," says the article, hinting that Beatrice might adopt the Church of England.

Just From Georgia

BY FRANK L. STANTON

A Hurrah-Song.

Our Fourth of July poor old boy is rather backward
this year, but here is one who evidently speaks with no uncertain voice.

A hundred and fifty years ago,
When America's flag was unfurled for the first time.

And Andy's torch
with a fiery glow,

Illumined a hopeful world,— prayed that this place where Right, not Might, should stand.

A symbol of men who were free;

And Freedoms' name that glowed band

Beneath it, to wonder, God grant as pass the golden years,

We hold that banner high!

America, no cloud of fears
Shall fleet, and azalea

Flowers pine again.

Unfeated the Eagle shall fly.

That Freedom born in blood and pain,
Must not, and shall not, die!

—DAVID EDWARD UNGAR.

Atlanta, Ga.

Editor Shannon pays a compliment to a brother editor as follows—

"Editor Albert Sweat, of the Calhoun Times has returned from Texas and announces that Calhoun is the most popular town on the trip.

That's characteristic of a country editor.

They all boost the home town.

There's not an exception on the part of the editor.

We don't blame Mr. Sweat. Calhoun is a good town. The citizens are the most patriotic people in Georgia and the water is supplied from a hold spring of the finest type of water."

To Summer.

Since her Summer go her way.

Let sweet Summer go her way!

It's the fickle one we know!

All her flowers are fading so!

Loving her well to well, Bid her welcome and farewell.

E. W. HOWE'S Monthly is quoted as saying that the late Mr. Bryan "ate six meals a day." (And to think that they said he died a poor man.)

A Note of Alarm.

(From the Times-Advertiser.)

Texas, it seems, is always starting us something. First that state sent us the boll weevil, and now we have the Texas fleas. It is going to keep up this practice of breeding pests, that state, the wheat states, have to pay for the cotton business. Between the boll weevil, Texas fleas and poor stands, it may be that we won't make such a big crop after all which should result in a good price.

The Passionate Shepherd to His Love," by Christopher Marlowe.

It is not necessary to be a poet in the accepted sense of that word, in order to use words and appropriate them. The man who brings symmetry and comprehension to a great work of art is quite as much an artist in his way as the creator of the thing he admires. This old poem of Marlowe's is almost a test of one's taste. A song that will never die because it is beauty in forever being based on the words of the "passionate few."

Come live with me and be my love,

And we will sit upon the rocks,

And see the shepherds feed their flocks

And shallow rivers to whose falls

Melodious streams sing madrigals.

And I will make these beds of roses

With a thousand fragrant sprays,

A cap of flowers, and a kirtle

Embroiled all with leaves of myrtle.

A gown made of the finest wool

Which from our pretty lambs we pull;

Fair-lined slippers for the cold,

With buckles of the purest gold.

With coral clasps and amber studs;

And these pleasures may thee move;

The shepherd swains shall dare and sing;

For thy delight, each May morning.

If these delights thy mind may move,

Then come with me and be my love.

Lights of Holland

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

Standing at the top of the ladder in so far as education is concerned, the Dutchman has no difficulty understanding the visitor from America or France, Spain and Germany. And he likes to sit down of an evening to discuss the merits and demerits of a country and compare them with conditions in his own land.

He does not boast of it, but his country is the birthplace of liberty and tolerance. There are a lot of fanatics in each country of course and Holland is not exempt, but as a rule there is true freedom here.

Every man respects the other's opinion and the most orthodox Calvinist is not in the least averse to having a set to with an atheist. The strange part about their conversations is the frankness. When a man is within the Doubting Thomas family in England or America, he sort of covers up his convictions. It is still not considered good taste to say that one does not believe in the supernatural with us.

Sessions Company Takes Over Wynne-Claughton, Inc.

Wynne-Claughton, Inc., real estate brokers and rental agents for the new Sessions Loan and Trust company, has been taken over by the Sessions Loan and Trust company, involving a complete reorganization of the latter concern and removal of its headquarters from Marietta to Atlanta, according to news from Friday.

John Alderman, former dean of the Florida Southern college, has been elected president of the new organization, which began its first operations in Atlanta Friday morning.

Moultrie B. Sessions, who has headed the Sessions Loan and Trust company in Marion for many years, has been named chairman of the board of directors. John Blue, of Chicago, and Archibald B. Sessions, of Marietta, are vice presidents of the company. Ralph B. Goodson, of Atlanta, secretary and treasurer. Lee M. Sessions, formerly of Marietta, who is now in south Georgia in the interest of the company, is assistant secretary and treasurer.

Claughton Sales Manager.

Edward N. Claughton, secretary and treasurer of Wynne-Claughton, Inc., will be sales manager in the bond department of the Sessions company. Albert S. Hatch, of Chicago, will have charge of leasing.

While purchase of Wynne-Claughton, Inc., stock by the Sessions Loan and Trust company took place some time ago, operations under the new regime did not begin until Friday. The company occupies the ground floor of the Wynne-Claughton building, where extensive alterations and improvements have been made. At a late date office space will be increased by opening up and remodeling the basement, directly under the present office.

All holdings of Wynne-Claughton, Inc., were included in the deal. Real estate for the Wynne-Claughton building in the St. Andrew's apartment and other important apartment buildings and business houses will be handled by the Sessions Loan and Trust company.

The Sessions company is one of the oldest companies of its kind in the section of the country. Offices are maintained in Washington, D. C., and a great deal of its business is carried on in the east.

Bond Importance Stressed.

Under the new plan, the bond department of the company will be one of its most important phases. Parks Johnson, of Atlanta, well-known bond expert, will be in charge of the Sessions Georgia bond department. In addition to its rental business, leases and bonds, the company will specialize in loans and finance.

A short time before taking over Wynne-Claughton, Inc., the Sessions Loan and Trust company increased its capital stock from $150,000 to $300,000.

"It is our plan to increase our capital stock to a half million dollars within the next two or three months," Mr. Sessions said, "and not long after that we plan to add another $100,000. We are rapidly expanding in every department, and with this reorganization

Mr. Sessions stated that there would be other important announcements regarding the new organization in the near future. ## Two Dry Agents Hurt as Autoist Charges Blockade

Bryson City, N. C., July 2.—(AP)—After blocking a road near here in his efforts to catch a liquor car, Ralph Garrett, federal prohibition officer, was probably fatally injured and his companion, Jess Ball, was severely hurt today when a negro driving a large touring car alleged to have charged the blockade.

The negro, Sam Scriv, is said to have approached the obstruction in the road, halted and reversed the car, and then crashed into the blockade, injuring the two men. Garrett was standing directly behind an automobile which had been placed in the middle of the road.

The negro was captured and a pistol is reported to have been taken from him. He is alleged to have snatched the pistol and fired one shot which went wild. One of the officers then shot him through the arm.

The negro said his home was at Thomasville, Ga., and that the owner of the car was an automobile dealer in Thomasville. He refused to give the owner's name.

The car which the negro was driving stopped to C. K. Ousley, of Thomasville, Ga. Mr. and Mrs. Ousley were in another car at the time, which was in front of the one occupied by the negro.

The officers permitted the car in which Mr. and Mrs. Ousley were riding to pass through the blockade and when the negro appeared he was ordered to halt. He is alleged to have driven his automobile in an attempt to plunge through the obstructions.

BRITISH WOMEN DEMAND EQUALITY

London, July 2.—(AP)— Hyde park, scene of the recent huge women's peace protest, tomorrow will see a great gathering here to demand political equality for 5,000,000 women who are disfranchised under the present law because they have not yet reached the age of 30.

Many leaders of the national women's party of the United States will be present, and a march which will begin at the Thames embankment and end at Hyde park. Noted speakers who have long been leaders in the women's movement, will talk from a series of platforms.

The recent action of the house of lords in declining to admit peers in their own right to sit in the upper house has prompted several peers, including the Countess Rhonda, to take energetic action in making tomorrow's demonstration unusually vigorous.

MRS. W. J. YOUNG DIES AFTER BRIEF ILLNESS

Mrs. William J. Young, 69, of 781 Ponce de Leon avenue, beloved Atlanta woman and wife of Dr. William J. Young, president of the Theological seminary department of Emory university since it was founded 11 years ago, died Friday morning at 6 o'clock at the home, following an illness of only two weeks.

Although she had been ill for only two weeks, her death was unexpected. Only three weeks ago she returned from San Antonio, Texas, where she has spent some time with her brother and sister, and seemed to be in the best of health immediately after her return, members of the family said.

A native of San Antonio, Texas, Mrs. Young came to Atlanta more than eleven years ago from Virginia, where her husband served various pastures of the state. He was a member of the Methodist church, and then served as pastor of the Richmond Methodist church, at Richmond, just prior to coming to Atlanta.

Mr. Carwell issued a short statement, in which he said he would announce his campaign platform in his speech to be delivered in Fitzgerald Monday.

Carwell's statement. Following is the statement of Mr. Carwell:

A propaganda movement has been spread over the state on the gubernatorial election, and the result of the election does not bear out. I find that the people generally have just begun to interest themselves in the election, and the result of the election is going to be will depend on the campaign to be carried on.

The effort to get spread abroad the idea that the man and not issues is going to win the election, I believe, has been placed. There are some very important issues, and the people of the state do not bear out. I find that the people generally have just begun to interest themselves in the election, and the result of the election is going to be will depend on the campaign to be carried on.

Mr. Young was an active member of the First Methodist church here, and despite her advanced age, was deeply interested in church affairs until she went to Texas to visit relatives.

Mrs. Young is survived by her husband, Dr. William J. Young, a sister, Mrs. C. Boyd, and a brother, William Campbell, of San Antonio, Texas. Barclay & Brandon in charge.

Congress Asked To Declare Song National Anthem

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, July 2.—A demand that congress officially declare the "Star-Spangled Banner" the national anthem of the United States was made yesterday by Francis Scott Key, author of the song, a native of Maryland. His anthem has never been officially adopted.

In a speech in the house, Linnithum commented that those members of the New York audience who sang the song anyhow.

Now Representative Linnithum as a result of that incident demands that congress officially declare that the "Star-Spangled Banner" is the national anthem.

Francis Scott Key, author of the song, was a native of Maryland. His anthem has never been officially adopted.

In a speech in the house, Linnithum commented that those members of the New York audience who sang the song anyhow.

"It is high time," he declared, "that in the history of this great republic, perhaps the most patriotic in the world, the division of allegiance should cease. Those who are not friendly with England that they hesitate to sing the "Star-Spangled Banner" should go to England and sing 'God Save the King,' and not bask under the sunshine and prosperity of the American republic while uttering such strong allegiance to other lands."

champion started down the sun-slecked harbor in a revenue cutter.

Aquitania Reached Dock. The giant liner, Aquitania, which brought Bobby and other American golfers from the scenes of their recent triumphs in British links, nosed her way into the lower bay shortly before noon.

Atlanta had sent a delegation of 100 Bobby Jones fans, most important among them being the champion's wife, mother and father. As many of these as could be accommodated were taken down the bay aboard the official welcoming boat, the "Macom."

Flung from the side of this craft, which also carried Mayor Walker's representative, a huge banner told all the harbor:

"Welcome Bobby Jones."

And when the young golfer and his comrades were taken from the Aquitania and brought back up the bay by the "Macom," the harbor took the line and sent up such a din of sirens and whistles that the swooping sea-gulls were frightened from the waters and took white-winged flight to forage elsewhere for their dinners.

At the Battery waited sightseeing buses with still other Atlantans, bearing more banners of welcome and large portraits of Bobby wearing his best smile.

But arrangements were not in order for the returning hero. With his father and young Wattie Gunn, his protege, beside him, and Walter Hagen, Al Watrous and Tom Paine of the United States Golf association close behind, Jones led the march of victory.

Mayor Welcomes Bobby.

In the old-fashioned city hall, where nobility and even royalty have been welcomed by New York mayors, "Jimmy" Walker made an appropriate speech.

"New York is proud to welcome you, and to have this chance to let you know how proud we are of your achievement abroad," said the mayor. "New York has only one regret, and that is that you come from Atlanta, if too, came from Atlanta recently unwillingly."

"We have always given our welcome to you with that peculiar grace which is characteristic of the south, but I assure you that ours is just as warm at that."

"When I was in the south, I was born in the house in which you were born. I made a special pilgrimage on the 17th of March. It is a good thing that birthday is not generally known as yet, or I can assure you that the house would have been carried away before this."

"Again I want to tell you how warm New York welcomes you and how proud we are to have you with us today."

The beaming semi-circle of Bobby's friends and admirers pressed closer around the flag-draped dias to catch the youngster's reply.

Bobby Replies.

"—," Bobby was heard to say.

His usually ruddy face was fairly glowing crimson with pleasure and embarrassment. But his tongue was tied up in a broad grin.

"—," added the champion. "—Most wonderful thing ever happened to me—can't tell you."

Then a tall, grey-haired Atlantan, called for three cheers and it was apparent that Bobby's speech of thanks was over.

The modest youngster mopped his brow in relief and the bandsmen in the balcony broke into the "Star Spangled Banner."

Followed a wide ride up town through respectfully stilled traffic, to the Hotel Vanderbilt where the Atlanta delegation, its blue flags draping the hotel lobbies, took charge of the young star.

every one how proud and happy this welcome had made him.

But it was Bobby's broad smile more than the halting words, which told those present just how happy the young Atlantan was.

Hagen Charlestons.

Others were introduced. Walter Hagen, conqueror of Abe Mitchell in a match of $3,000 a match. Wattie Gunn, second best of Atlanta's golfers, and Scott Hudson, president of the Atlanta Athletic club. But they recognized that this was Bobby Jones night, and were content to rise and bow to their champion. The crippled Hagen, in an unusually layish mood, did step out on the floor and do a "Charleston," which might have been the envy of any professional dancer.

Walter's performance furnished a highlight of the evening, and otherwise was rather solemn, as those present endeavored to demonstrate to Bobby Jones how much they thought of him and his golfing prowess.

In addition to the principal figures at the table were Mr. and Mrs. Charl Black, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood Hurt, William Quinn and Colonel W. R. Sample. Scattered through the room were many figures of prominence in the golfing world.

Among these were Mr. and Mrs. C. Towns, Albert MacKenzie, father of Roland; Bill Keeke, metropolitan champion; Thomas Paine, director of the U. S. Golf association, and many others.

Tribute Is Climax.

This signal tribute from the mayor of the world's largest city, came as a climax to a series of surprised ovations extending from the great liner down the bay and to the very portals of the city hall.

The story of welcome given Bob and Watts could not be chronicled in a tone of epic poetry, but will live in the minds of all who witnessed it until long after these two Atlanta sports turn their backs on Gotham en route to the national open at Columbus, Ohio.

When the announcement was made at the Vanderbilt Thursday morning that a limited number from the Atlanta delegation would be given an official cutter and challenge to the Cup, many were disappointed, but the capacity of the little vessel was limited and restrictions were necessary, according to members of the committee.

Riding in a fleet of cars furnished by the city of New York, the official "welcomers" left the Vanderbilt in a body and headed to the pier with sirens announcing to the world at large that the voice of Gotham was passing. Upon arrival at the battery the delegation was escorted aboard the Macom, named as we were told, for the initial syllables of the two words, mayor's committee—and sped across the bay to the Jersey side where we picked up a quarantine officer and received news from the tower regarding the exact arriving time of the Aquitania.

Nearly an hour passed before customs officials announced that the giant ship was 30 minutes from Quarantine and would arrive by the time the Macom could reach the rendezvous.

Festivities Begin.

That announcement was a signal for the beginning of festivities in earnest, and with the dazzling array of bands and with the blasts of the whistles on the pier for supremacy in the field of brawling, anxious scores lined the rails of both tiny decks in an effort to the other semi-final.

At Bobby's Banquet

New York, July 3.—At a dinner given Bobby Jones by the Atlantans at the Vanderbilt, Friday evening, Walter Hagen, deciding apparently that the affair was about to become a function and that the guests were in danger of becoming stiff and formal, signaled the orchestra leader, demanded the spot-light, and entertained the guests with a solo Charleston.

All traces of formality went overboard as the company cheered him.

Joseph Johnson, New York's commissioner of public works, represented the city as chairman of Mayor Walker's welcoming committee.

His usually ruddy face was fairly glowing crimson with pleasure and embarrassment. But his tongue was tied up in a broad grin.

"—," added the champion.

"—Most wonderful thing ever happened to me—can't tell you."

Then a tall, grey-haired Atlantan, called for three cheers and it was apparent that Bobby's speech of thanks was over.

The modest youngster mopped his brow in relief and the bandsmen in the balcony broke into the "Star Spangled Banner."

Followed a wide ride up town through respectfully stilled traffic, to the Hotel Vanderbilt where the Atlanta delegation, its blue flags draping the hotel lobbies, took charge of the young star.

How Metropolitan Papers Announced Plans for Welcome to Bobby Jones

ALL SET FOR JONES' WELCOME.

(From The New York Times.) Atlanta's leading citizen, Robert T. Jones, is on his way home fetching with him the British open championship cup which he won so gloriously at St. Anne's recently. Bobby Jones will arrive on the Saturday morning with his host by delegation from his own home town and toasted and cheered and feted in a manner entirely befitting the occasion. Mayor Walker, extender of official right hand to Polar Byrd, prince of shahs, shoguns and other big guns, has been pressed into service.

There is something very homely in the feeling Atlanta has had for Bobby Jones ever since his star began to sparkle in the golfing heavens. Even when Bobby was a knee-pants golfer, Atlantans hitched their wagons to all his wiggles and jiggles. The songs they sang on the way were always hopeful, never doubting. And now they are reaping the reward for Bobby has laid bounteous spoils in their laps.

No other golfer has had anywhere near the amount of confidence reposed in him that Bobby has. Chicago used to pamper Cliff Evans, but in not many the whole-breed manner than Atlanta has Jones. The reason probably is that Atlanta is smaller than Chicago—chummier, perhaps. Another reason is that Bobby was an only child until Watts Gunn was adopted, while Chicago has a large family to lavish affection on. Whether the result, the fact remains that in each and every golf tournament in which Bobby has competed, no master where or how far away, he has never lacked the support of his townfolk—mental, moral, even physical if the occasion required.

Atlanta's confidence in Jones has never wavered, not even in the other days in the years of his lean and failure, the Georgians never once lost faith in him. There was a time when his own faith was somewhat shaken, but not Atlanta's. They knew he would come through and come through the blues, first at Inwood, then at Union and Olinwood and now at St. Ann's. For the last few weeks Bobby Jones will have to run the gauntlet of acclamation, to bear the burden that's part and parcel of fame. It will probably be a tedious time for Bobby, who is far too modest to enjoy the ceremony he will be obliged to go through and the adulation he will have to listen to.

Bobby has won championships in the past and has gone back to his Atlantans to receive due honors, but to him the Atlantans are coming to him to bring him back from England his first foreign trophy, the British open title.

From all indications the welcome to the conqueror by Mayor Walker & city hall will bring a tremendous outpouring of friends, many of whom are coming from the southland on a special train. A mayor's committee of 100 will greet him and in all probability he will have for a part of the time his side the Atlanta Amateur, a star who only a short time ago returned with the other great British title, the amateur, but was too ill to receive the honors due him—Jess Sweetser.

BOBBY JONES PAYS TRIBUTE TO SWEETSER

Walter F. George, of Georgia, acting as toastmaster tonight at the Jones dinner, in introducing Bobby said: "He has represented the very best in our life," adding that "no clean-cut American youth can go to any nation and win from the best there and have accorded to him more genuine sympathy or appreciation of his prowess. He has endeared himself not only to golfers and to Atlanta, most generous of southern cities, and by that possibly the most generous of all cities with the possible exception of New York, but he has endeared himself to all men and women in America."

Following this introduction, Jones blushed and smiling, at first, then, as the orchestra played "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Jones exhibited through his talk the same bashfulness modesty as was toastmaster tonight at the Jones dinner, in the years of his lean and failure, the Georgians never once lost faith in him. There was a time when his own faith was somewhat shaken, but not Atlanta's. They knew he would come through and come through the blues, first at Inwood, then at Union and Olinwood and now at St. Ann's. For the last few weeks

Running and Harness Races Will Feature Big July Celebration—Many Famous Stables Are Entered in Classic Here Today and Monday.

Atlanta's celebration of the Fourth of July will open with a thunder of flying hoofs on the Southeastern fair race track at Lakewood park at 1 o'clock this afternoon when the first thoroughbred running horses seen in Atlanta in three years will face the barrier with their gaily clad jockeys, and the fastest pacing and trotting horses in the south will battle for honors and big purses in the first events of a two-day racing program, beginning this afternoon and concluding Monday afternoon.

The gates will open promptly at noon today, two street car gates on the main thoroughfare side of the park and two automobile gates on the South Pryor street side, marched over South Pryor street or over Stewart avenue to Lakewood avenue to South Pryor street.

Jockey Races.

Fourteen Kentucky thoroughbreds, fresh from the Latonia and Lexington turf tracks, will be hurled under the barrier by their jockeys at Lakewood park today in the first two running races.

The third event of today's program, starting at 1 o'clock, will be the 2 2/3 trot, and will match nine young horses, all of whom will be running for official win-race records and entry into the official bluebook of horsemen as the horses which have arrived.

It will be featured, in so far as popular interest is concerned, by the fact that Frieda, the "inxed" filly of the E. T. Cannon stables, J. Conner, will be in the race, and her thirteenth attempt to break the chain of hard luck that has kept her out of first place, and an official record, ever since she started racing last year.

Open All Day, Today!

July. Vacation. Halcyon days of rest and play. Although when gone your working-day world may be in the next county, you are yet leagues away because the routine of business or household is interrupted. It is the law of change, and the maker of phrases for children was better inspired than he knew in remarking that all work and no play would make Jack a dull boy. It serves for grown-ups as well.

Let us hope that wherever you go, you will—

"Find tongues in trees, books in running brooks, sermons in stones and good in everything"

May we serve you? Here is a store full of practical assistance. Things touching on and appertaining to vacation. Frock for train or motor. Others to wear when the band is hitting on all saxophones and you could dance until morning. The first point on the vacation compass is High Point, at Whitehall and Hunter.

Open all day today. July 4th falling on Sunday, the store will remain closed all day Monday, July 5th.

MURDER.

His persecutor was dead. Of that there could be no manner of doubt. John had seen death too often not to recognize it now. But there were indications in plenty of life having fled so recently that the exact interval since death took place was difficult to estimate. The limbs were still quite flexible, the eyes had hardly begun to glaze, and blood was oozing steadily from a peculiarly ghastly wound in the throat—a jagged, horrid sort of wound, neither cut nor stab, but looking as though some maniac or predatory beast had torn violently at the windpipe and jugular vein. And yet, though the poor stricken flesh might almost quiver to the touch, the turbulent soul had already leaped the tremendous gulf between time and eternity.

A match does not last long, so John had to let go the listless head until he struck another. He had seen already that there was not much blood on the planks of the landing stage, for the quite obvious reason that each was separated from the other by a space of at least quarter of an inch, so the greater flow had poured into the lake. What John wanted to ascertain now was whether any weapon or other trace of the murderer could be discovered before he moved. The wound could never have been self-inflicted; there was a thousand to one chance that it might have been the result of an accident. At any rate, it was well to make some sort of hasty examination without rising, so he held the second match well above his head, and peered around within its small and feebly lighted periphery.

Then Spot growled again, quite viciously this time, every hair in his ruff stiffening into a bristle. John sprang upright, and faced an oncoming figure, only to be dazzled by the gleam of a torch, while a gruff voice demanded:

"Noo, what's gae in on here?"

John shaded his eyes as best he could.

"There has been murder done, I'm afraid," he replied. "But be careful how you advance, whoever you are. My dog will certainly pull you down if you come too near. And take that light off my face, confound you, or I'll throw both you and it into the loch!"

"Y'd better be tell' I'm the policeman frae the village, Mr. Panton," said the voice.

"All the more reason you shouldn't behave like a fool. Search the landing stage! Look inside the boathouse! Mr. Alastair Panton has been killed, murdered, I believe. He must have been attacked unexpectedly by some scoundrel, because I stood within a hundred yards during the last few minutes, and I never heard a sound. My dog did, though. He dragged me here. Haven't you a whistle? Well, blow it, you ass! We want lights, and help, and they'll hear you at the house. There may be someone on the loch."

He broke off suddenly. A thought, suggested by the words on his lips, flamed into conviction.

"Bring that torch here, where it is needed," he ordered, not unaware that Spot was tugging him in the direction of the boathouse. "Do you know how many craft should be under cover there for the night?"

Campbell, fumbling for his whistle, and more than a little annoyed by the tone adopted by one whom he was still inclined to regard with suspicion, could not choose but obey. He knew his master when he met him, and, even though he might have to arrest John later, he accepted his leadership now. For all that, Aberdeen neither encourages nerves nor yields to panic. He had the whistle in his hand, but forbore from using it for a second. His keen eyes had detected something on the tarred planks between Alastair's body and the front of the boathouse, where a small veranda, facing the lake, gave some degree of shelter from rain.

"Here's drops o' bluid," he said. "Mebbe yer dog found them, an' that is why he's pullin' sae hard on the strap."

John looked, too. The policeman's timely discovery went to prove that his first idea was correct—the murderer had escaped in a boat. "These drops are off the weapon, not from my cousin's wound," he said. "The jugular vein is torn—the blood must have gushed out like water from a tap. . . . Here are a launch, a dinghy, and a fishing punt. Anything missing, do you think?"

"Not a thing. An', by that token, I ha'e a sort o' suspicion that a bit boat is gaen frae the moorings ahent the brig."

"Very well. Stand fast, and blow that whistle for all you're worth. Spot and I will soon find out if any boat is landing higher up."

Then Campbell tried to assert himself.

"I'm no sae sure—" he began.

"Aye, aren't you? But I am. You can do all the thinking you like a little later. At present I am in command, and don't you dare interfere."

John jumped the narrow deep water inlet through which the boats reached cover. He had done it many a time before, and knew exactly what sort of landing he would find in the scrub. Spot followed. Campbell heard the two scrambling over the rocks at the foot of Ian's Leap. They might be escaping under his very nose, though, to do him justice, he did not really think anything of the sort. Still, he was irritated. His importance had been belittled. His own superintendent would not have ordered him to do this and that with such an air. At that moment he was feeling far from friendly disposed toward Lord Oban's son. Then he beheld himself, and blew the first loud summons on the whistle. In a few seconds he blew again.

To his dismay, the first to reach him were the two young ladies from the castle. Most certainly he did not want them. He hurried a few paces to meet them with the warning cry:

"Bide where ye are, laddies, I beg. Or, better still, hurry back an' send some of them men."

"O, is that what you Campbell?" said Betty, vastly relieved. "I didn't recognize you for the moment. What has gone wrong?"

"Everything, miss. Bad wark, I fear me. But will ye no do as I ask, an' send help?"

"Help for what, man? Can't you say what has happened?"

"There's a deid man lyin' a bit back there, miss."

"A dead man? Not my cousin, Mr. Panton?"

"Ay, if ye will hae it."

"Mr. Alastair Panton?" said Eileen, faintly.

"Ay, mam."

"But what—who—has killed him?"

There was agony in the question, and terror, too. The policeman was losing his temper, and caught nothing of this.

"Awa 'wi ye!" he shouted. "Ye stan' there not daein' a thing when I bid ye—"

He put the whistle to his lips and blew a third time, grasping Betty's arm more gently when she would have run past him. Then two shots were fired from a point half way down the open avenue, and the pellets rattled in a shower on the boathouse roof.

"Hi, there!" he roared. "What devil's business is that? Would ye be for murderin' the young laddies, an' all?"

"That will be Dougal!" announced Betty, calmly. "He will persist in carrying a gun at full cock, and I've often warned him as to the result if he trips. For heaven's sake tell him not to reload . . . O, my! You're not hit, Eileen, are you?"

CHILDREN FULFILL IDEALS OF PARENTS, DECLARES DAVIS

Chicago, July 2.—(P)—Children eventually are the means of fulfilling the hopes and ideals of their parents and ancestors. James G. Davis, secretary of labor, said in an address to the annual convention of the educational division of Moshofsky high school.

The banquet was held in connection with the 35th annual convention of the Loyal Order of Moose, of which Mr. Davis is director general.

The chairman of the division said:

"My dad and our dream is right," he said, "the thing that we have longed to do, and have failed in doing, our children will accomplish. I believe that all the ages have had longings, yearnings, strivings for the good, that we were unable to accomplish, but that will live on in their children and in time be brought to fruition by the children brought to manhood."

PRICES DROP AT NEW YORK

New York, July 2.—(P)—The cotton market was stabilized today by publication of the government crop report which was followed by a break into new low ground for the season on active new crop positions. October sold off from 16.42 to 16.04 and closed at 16.20, compared with 16.42 at the close yesterday. The general market closed very steadily; net 22 points lower to a point slightly higher, later month being relatively quiet.

The market was comparatively quiet before the report appeared, with fluctuations irregular. The opening was steady at an advance of one point on July, but generally 2 to 6 points lower under the influence of protection from adverse weather conditions. A flurry of covering after early offerings had been absorbed, worked prices up several points, July selling at 17.93 and December, 16.35, high points of the morning.

These prices attracted scattering liquidation and the market broke lower to 16.42, with December sold off on good weather in the belt.

October trading at 16.02 and December at 15.91, or 7 to 8 points below the previous close. Prices soon rallied, however, on covering. October trading up to 16.10 and December up to 16.12, from the lows.

After the official crop report was issued October traded down to 15.73 and December to 15.68, or 37 points down from the early high, but later rallied to 15.89 for October and 15.85 for December, or 10 to 18 points up from the low of the day and closed near the highest of the recovery.

Exports for the day totalled 32,393 and for the week 120,790 bales.

There is still little alarm here over the Texas cotton flea, as none have been found to amount to anything, the farmers are on the lookout and are taking every precaution to protect their cotton from the insects.

No boll weevils are reported, either, which is very encouraging to those interested in agriculture.

On Sunday the Fourth

Freedom for All

The following is issued by the committee on church cooperation.

Twelve times in a century, if our calculation is correct, the Fourth of July falls on Sunday. Tomorrow, the 180th anniversary of the Declaration of American Independence, is one of those years.

Our churches should be crowded.

If not a word were spoken from the pulpit, Sunday and the Fourth, falling in the same day, would in themselves bring a message to every Christian American, particularly to those resident in the state of Georgia.

For a century and a half, once a year on July 4, our people have been celebrating the birthday of American Liberty.

On the first day of every week for more than 10 centuries, or for approximately 100,000 Sundays, Christians have been celebrating the day upon which our Saviour, by His resurrection, His victory over the grave, proclaimed the freedom of all, who would accept the gift of God, from the bondage of sin and death.

On that "first day of the week," Mary Magdalene, who had plumbined the depths of hell and damnation, Peter, who had denied his friend with oath, and John, and those other disciples, who had forsaken Jesus in the hour of His betrayal, were the first to behold our Risen Saviour.

Lord, and to know the glorious liberty, which He had won for them. Thousands shared their joy in a few short weeks.

The Men.

And, before many years, Paul, who knew these people and who had also seen our Risen Saviour, was pointing to the resurrection, when he said: "Thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord.

Not only an unbroken line of Sabbath, but also an unbroken line of men, women and children, who have found freedom through their faith in the Risen Lord, connects us with that "first day of the week" of long ago, and with all for which it stood, then, and with all for which it stands today.

To the faith, which we ventured their all upon this faith, which the Christian Sabbath proclaims with its every dawn, we owe the liberty which we remember, when we celebrate the Fourth.

To Georgia in the south came Oglethorpe, with his companions, bringing the motto, "Not for self, but for others," and a charter, which forbade slavery and the liquor traffic, the first

MRS. M'PHERSON TO FACE JURORS

Los Angeles, July 2.—(P)—Mrs. Anna Semple McPherson, evangelist, and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, returned today from Douglas, Ariz., and Mrs. Kennedy announced her daughter would appear voluntarily before the county jury to testify she was kidnapped at Ocean Park May 26 by two men and a woman and was held for ransom.

The Los Angeles pastor and her mother arrived from a hurried trip to Douglas, where they went Wednesday in an attempt to locate the cabin where Mrs. McPherson said she was held by her abductors.

The evangelist's kidnapping was in distinct contrast to her triumphal return last Saturday when she was met at the station by a cheering throng estimated at 50,000 persons. Today a small crowd of curious persons and a woman pastor slipped through a rear exit and hurried to her residence.

Promised grand jury investigation of the alleged kidnapping, by the federal grand jury and another by the county inquisitorial body, awaited Mrs. McPherson's presence in Los Angeles.

DAYTONA REALTORS SEEK TO ELIMINATE HIGH HOTEL RATES

Daytona Beach, Fla., July 2.—(P)—Meeting today, the Daytona Beach realty board inaugurated a state-wide movement to force hotel owners of Florida to post their rates all the same and on the inquisition board and not on the exploitation board.

The campaign's demand was in distinct contrast to her triumphal return last Saturday when she was met at the station by a cheering throng estimated at 50,000 persons. Today a small crowd of curious persons and a woman pastor slipped through a rear exit and hurried to her residence.

Promised grand jury investigation of the alleged kidnapping, by the federal grand jury and another by the county inquisitorial body, awaited Mrs. McPherson's presence in Los Angeles.

PROPOSALS FOR PRINTING FOR THE STATE OF GEORGIA, 1926-1927.

Proposed by the Printing Commission at the office of Secretary of State, Atlanta, until 10 o'clock a. m. of July 12, 1926, will be opened for bidding on the printing of the state budget, which is to be submitted to the legislature.

The budget, which was submitted, was "punched up" out of the Potomac river by a ship-building corporation during the world war. Moore recently told the house military affairs committee. More than a score of illicit money was said to be in operation underhandedly on this tract.

Contract or contracts shall be for the printing of approximately 1,000,000 copies of the state budget, 500 digests for improved property and as many wild land digests as may be required. The digest will be in the annual reports of all departments required by law to be printed, there being 120 of them.

The right is reserved to issue contract for all the above to any one firm, or to divide the work among two or more firms. The bill shall appear to the best interest of the State of Georgia. The successful bidder or bidders will be required to give a surety bond in the amount of 100 per cent of the total cost for the faithful performance of the contract. Specifications and bid blanks will be furnished upon application to the Department of Public Printing, 222 State Capitol. Right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

This June 15, 1926.

Persecution by Crowe Blamed Nicholas Michels Is Believed To Have Drowned Self For Suicide of Former Aide

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Atlanta Tribune.)

Chicago, Ill., July 2.—Alfred Leon, a tumor and nearly blind in one eye, Attorney Nicholas Michels, 65 years old, former assistant corporation counsel and assistant state's attorney, is believed to have committed suicide today by drowning himself in the Fox river near Cary, Ill.

Mr. Michels' hat and cane were found in a rowboat floating in the river and in his room in the resort of Charles Frisch were found letters proclaiming Michels' intention to kill himself.

Two letters, one written last Monday, the other Tuesday, were addressed to the public, and for the most part described Michels' suffering from the tumor and his helplessness of ever being cured.

He then launched into a story of political persecution.

"Calumny of the basest kind, bred of political scoundrels, was the beginning of my troubles," the lawyer declared.
